Everyone in China is doing their part in the fight against the new coronavirus. We will win the battle!

Life in the time of outbreak (P4-5)

Fast reading: Guess the main idea of the passage.

The 2020 winter holiday was different for most people. No Spring Festival gatherings, no family reunion (重聚) meals, no hanging out with friends. Instead, we had masks on our faces, traffic controls (交通管制), closed shops, delayed (延迟的) school or work days, temperature checks, and slow delivery services (快递服务). ←

Because of the new coronavirus outbreak (新型冠状病毒爆发), the government (政府) has called on everyone to stay at home as much as possible. During this time, most people have shown their understanding, taking medical advice and following the new rules. Everyone is making small sacrifices (牺牲) to help fight the virus. Here are the stories of three teenagers and their families during the viral outbreak. | ←

Tong Zexi, 15, Harbin

Tong has stayed in his house for more than 20 days. Sometimes he really wants to run outside and breathe (呼吸) freely without a mask. “But I know I need to behave myself and bring no trouble. I understand that at this moment, if one gets sick, many others could be affected (受影响),” he said. With this in mind, he has stayed at home and worked on his homework. He also tries to do some exercise indoors and develop healthy habits, believing that staying fit will help prevent the disease.

Li Mingyu, 15, Lanzhou

Li worries about his father a lot these days. His father is a doctor of traditional Chinese medicine (中医). The hospital he works at has had several coronavirus pneumonia patients. Although Li’s father doesn’t have to treat (治疗) the patients, there are still risks of infection (感染的风险). To help cheer up his coworkers in the hospital, Li’s father made bags of traditional Chinese medicine and gave them out. “My father asks me to stay home and study hard. He said that no matter what I will do in the future, I should be a good person and help others.”

Zhao Junyan, 15, Shanghai

Zhao is a Grade 8 student from Shanghai. On Feb 3, he transported (运输) 15,000 masks from Indonesia back to China. During the winter holiday, Zhao went to visit his uncle in Jakarta. When he saw the news about the outbreak and the shortage of masks in China, he and his uncle bought as many masks as they could. At first, Zhao’s mom wanted him to return home later because of the risk of infection, but Zhao insisted (坚持). Alone, with five big suitcases (行李箱), Zhao flew back and gave all the masks to Cangnan, Zhejiang, his hometown. “When a country is in trouble, everyone should give a hand,” Zhao said. “What I have done is what an ordinary (普通的) Chinese person can do.”
