Wuhan, the capital city of Hubei, is usually a busy city during Spring Festival. All corners of the city rang with laughter (笑声). The music of busy lanes and streets was heard everywhere. However, things went different due to the outbreak of COVID-19.

On Jan 23, Wuhan was to control the spread of the virus. All (中心) of more than 10 million people temporarily closed its airport and all main roads out of the city. Suspended (暂停) public buses.

The closure was a very difficult decision. Wang Xiaodong, governor of Hubei, told China Daily.

Without doubt, the lockdown brought hardship to the people of Wuhan. To Xinhua News Agency, the city is a shortage of vegetables, masks (口罩), medical workers and the infected. But in the face of the virus, a quarantine (隔离区) is effective and immediate method.

Like most senior high school students in China, 17-year-old Liu Yu, from Yantai Development Zone Senior High School, Shandong, had planned to resume (恢复) her studies earlier this year to prepare for the upcoming gaokao.

However, the Ministry of Education (MOE) announced in late January that the spring semester for all schools would be postponed (延迟) due to the novel coronavirus pneumonia outbreak, forcing students like Liu to stay at home.

Rather than falling behind their original plan, Liu and many others have already begun studying full-time again - - only from home - in what may have become the largest online teaching trial (试行) the country has ever seen.

To go with students' new learning environment, a "cloud platform (云平台)" was launched (启动) on Feb 17 to provide students in elementary and secondary schools with education resources covering all major school subjects, noted Lü Yugang, head of the ministry's Department of Basic Education. "Students will be able to attend classes online or study via television," he told China Daily.

For students in remote or rural areas with poor internet accessibility (获取), a television channel by China Education Television started airing classes on Feb 17 so they can study at home, Xinhua News Agency reported.

But the online platform and TV channel don't just offer school knowledge. Students can also learn about epidemic prevention and control (疫情防控) tips during the period, and receive education on patriotism (爱国主义), life and psychological (心理的) health, according to a guideline issued by the MOE.

For some students, the chance to study from home has had some unexpected benefits. Yuan Siyi, who lives in Hubei province, used to get up before 6 am on school days, but since starting online courses, she gets more hours of sleep each morning. "I like online teaching because I have more freedom at home," Yuan, who began her all-day courses on Feb 3, told TEENS.

However, online teaching and learning has its weaknesses compared to studying in a physical classroom. "My motivation to study is stronger when my classmates are around me and all working very hard," Yuan said. According to the MOE, online courses are only temporary measures taken during the epidemic. "When the new semester begins, schools will not replace classroom teaching with online classes," Lü added.

What can we learn in the online platform and TV channel?

- school knowledge
- epidemic prevention and control tip
- education patriotism
- life and psychological health

Can we learn all these in physical schools?
Of course.

According to the MOE, online courses are only temporary measures taken during the epidemic.

What benefits or weaknesses do you think online course have?

Benefits:

- get more hours of sleep
- have more free time at home
- break the limitation of time and space
- have more flexibility in teaching style
- share resources
- reduce costs
- have relaxed learning environment

Weaknesses:

- have weak motivation to study
- be bad for eyesight
- be easily affected by the outside world
- lack face-to-face guidance and communication
- may not answer in time or clearly
- can't guarantee the efficiency of study
- widen the gaps between students

If you were the headmaster,

1. will you abandon online courses when the new semester begins? Why or why not?

2. what good use can we make of online courses?

*Whatever answers you have, I think we'd better polish up online platforms and online courses for unexpected needs like this year.

*Online courses can serve as a good supplement to schooling.
